ACADEMIC REGALIA

The caps and gowns worn during college functions such as Commencement date back to the Middle Ages, when they served both a functional and an ornamental role. They distinguished people with education from those who had none, and also kept the wearer warm. All the graduates tonight are wearing black caps and gowns, although the round caps that would have been worn during the Middle Ages have been replaced by the mortarboard style of Oxford University.

The regalia is enlivened by a number of colors, each of which has particular significance. Gold tassels, for example, designate graduates who have earned honors or high honors through their academic performance. Members of the Phi Theta Kappa honor society may also wear gold stoles around the collar of their gowns.

In addition, the platform party also wears a variety of regalia and colors. Those with master's degrees usually wear gowns with long sleeves, which allow the arms of the wearer to emerge from slits at the elbow. Doctoral gowns are more elaborate, marked with velvet panels down the front and along the neck, and the sleeves are bell-shaped. A European tradition dating back to the 13th century, the ceremonial mace, which is carried in the processional, originated as a weapon that sergeants-at-arms once carried to protect the monarch. The mace has evolved into a symbol of official authority.

The hoods are the brightest and most symbolic part of academic raiment. Each person wears a hood representing the highest degree earned, and varying lengths show the levels of degree. The colors lining the hood represent the school from which the degree was earned and the colors of the border indicate the field of study. Those with degrees in the humanities, for example, have a white border, while engineering is indicated by orange, nursing by apricot, and education by light blue.

The student and faculty marshals have the honor of wearing gold regalia.

Graduates wear their tassels on the right side of their caps prior to receiving their degrees. After receiving their diplomas, they should shift the tassels to the left side, indicating that the degrees have been conferred.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

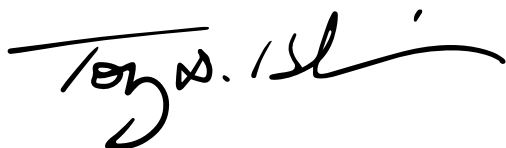

To the graduates, families, and friends of the Class of 2026:

The moment you've all been waiting for has arrived! Your papers, projects, and final exams have been graded — and the result is this: you are graduating. Now, thousands of supporters have filled this arena to bear witness to the culmination of this chapter of your SUNY Broome story.

On behalf of more than 700 members of our faculty and staff, I would like to thank today's graduates for entrusting us to be part of your educational journey. We take this responsibility very seriously, and are truly honored to have played our small part in your accomplishment.

Once you cross the stage at commencement, you will join a strong alumni network of 57,000 graduates who proudly call SUNY Broome their alma mater. Whether you're beginning a new career, advancing in your current field, or transferring to pursue a bachelor's degree, know that SUNY Broome is always here to support you in your future endeavors. Remember, you belong at Broome: as a student yesterday, a graduate today, and an alum forever. Please stay connected to your community's college, as we look forward to celebrating your continued successes.

With Hornet Pride, I extend my congratulations to you – and to all who have encouraged and supported you along the way!
